WEDNESDAY

Week 6

amy also new that the bowl of milk would be use less. The commonly held beleif that snakes are attracted to milk are unfounded. Amy looked all around the room, but could'nt see the snake. She reelized that their was only one place it could be: under the table.

Her first thought is to jump back and warn the other's but she knew that any sudden moves could friten the snake into striking. She had to find a way to gives the snake time to leave. Just then, there was a conveenyunt lull in the conversation. Amy calmly proposed an idea. Lets have a contest she said. Every one agreed that it might be fun.

THURSDAY

Week 6

I'll count slowly to 300. Thats five minute's. Dont move a muscel until I reach 300—or you wont get desert," Amy said.

The guest's sat like stone statues while Amy counted. Just as she got to 280, she saw the snake emmerge and slither out the open door. It was probably attracted by the pet mouse, which the hosts' kept in a cage on the patio. Amy jumped up to close the sliding doors The other guests gasped in horrer when they saw the snake.

"Just one thing mystifies me said Amy turning toward the hostess. How did you know a snake was in the room

"It was crawling across my feet replied the hostess.
